SKULL IN THE MOONLIGHT TERRIFIES A PAIR OF LOVERS ON KAALAWAI BEACH

SKELETON was recently unearthed along the beach at Kaslawai in front A of Cecil Brown's seaside residence. It lay on the beach for sometime, shunned by the natives, who became superst tious, and were seemingly afraid to venture in its immediate vicinity. A few days ago some boys took possession of the skull, erected it on a stick with the grinning face staring townwards, and await-In the evening shortly after the moon made its appearance in the heavens, a couple drove along the heach in a bugty. In the light of the mon's rays the skull gleamed almost phosphorescent-like and had the appearance of a specter Suddenly a scream was neard above the roar of the breakers. The couple had caught sight of the "thing," and their hearts almost traze with horror. Furthermore, it seemed to them the zhost was approaching them and blinking at them with sightless eyes. The horse, too, took fright and commenced backing until the buggy was in the breakers. The young man held manfully onto the reins although nearly paralyzed with fear and finally managed to turn the horse's head in the direction of Diamond Head.

Big rocks, soft sand, rolling breakers, were unheeded as the frantic beings whipped the animal on in a mad galon. No stop was made until Kaplolani Park was reached. 'Lae young man lit a cigar, chewed the end savagely, and then calmly related how cleverly he managed the dash of the runaway animal. The next day covers inquiries were made and the truth came out, but the hero It is reported that Louis Morrison will still maintains that the flight was caused by the running away of his horse, a livery animal and one that he was not used to.
